among them being the aforesaid Geo. L. Salter. That as such agent he negotiated loans and borrowed money for quite a number of persons from the said J. Frank & Sons. That in this particular instance he indorsed the check 'as attorney in fact' for said Geo. L. Salter and as he honestly thought and believed and believes he was authorized to do in this particular instance; that said check was delivered to one Robinson, a friend of this respondent, to be cashed by him, that said respondent paid to your respondent a part of the money on said check at one time, the balance being paid at other times. That after receiving the money he told Salter he was prepared to pay him the money, and Salter replied that the matter was in the hands of Mr. Crouch and thereafter when he learned that the said check was in the hands of Mr. Rembert of the city of Columbia, he went to the office of said Rembert for the purpose of taking up the same, but found Mr. Rembert out of the office and for this reason did not then take said check as your respondent fully intended and proposed to do." It was further stated that his brother paid the amount on the check without his knowledge. He said in his return that "in indorsing said check and having the same cashed he was acting honestly and he verily thought and believed and had no intention of depriving either Mr. Salter or Messrs. Frank & Sons or Mr. Robinson of their

The witness answering the charge relative to the Munsay claim for $103, admitted that he was employed as agent to collect for the Murray Drug company and said that he had collected some money from Mr. Dowling of Saluda, but that it had been applied to other claims. He said that he gave the receipt in the name of the Murray Drug company, but that the amounts collected had been sent to firms outside the State.

Mr. Evans Explains.

Mr. Evans finished his direct testimony and was then cross-examined by Solicitor Cobb, but he stuck to his explanation of the charges and held that he had done nothing unprofessional. Details of several alleged transactions were gone into, but Mr. Evans had an explanation for each and every one of them, which the prosecution could not

The latter explained that once he had attempted to fire a privy which stood directly in front of his house but the fire went out, the privy being a nuisance and situated on vacant land. It was later moved near the house of Mr. Wheeler and when the chunk of burned wood was found in it this gave rise to rumors of some one trying to fire Mr. Wheeler's premises. Mr. Crouch explained the incident to Mr. Wheeler and everything was satisfactory.
